

The Youth Employment Innovation Challenge

The Youth Employment Innovation Challenge (YEIC) is a two year program funded by the Department of Industry (DoI). At the end of the two year period, DoI will undertake an evaluation assessing the effectiveness of the program. As part of this research, DoI would like to access your personal information (including sensitive information) collected by batyr using the Common Assessment Tool. DoI would like your consent to link your data across different government departments including Family and Community Services, Department of Justice, Department of Health and state health agencies, Department of Education, Department of Social Services and the Australian Taxation Office. This research will enable DoI to develop future programs best suited to the needs of young unemployed people. Note that non-participation in the program evaluation will not exclude you from accessing YEIC.
